Forecast For London & Southeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Friday 24 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mild, mainly dry and mostly cloudy.

Today:
A dry, mostly cloudy morning with patchy low cloud and fog slowly lifting and clearing. By the afternoon most places remaining dry but rain moving in from the southwest before dusk. Feeling mild. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Tonight:
Rain and drizzle spreading northeastwards to all parts through the evening. Becoming mainly dry after midnight though low cloud becoming extensive with some mist and fog patches developing. Minimum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Saturday:
A damp, murky Christmas Day for many. Some morning drizzle, then more persistent rain spreading northeast to many parts by evening. Feeling rather chilly with a noticeable easterly breeze. Maximum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Dull and damp early on Boxing Day, but drier and brighter later. Generally cloudy Monday and Tuesday with periods of rain or drizzle. Winds often light and turning less cold.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.